Breakfast with Citigroup Chairman John Dugan:

A Discussion on Gender and Diversity Pay Gaps

Sally Miller and Amy Friend of ALLRISE DC invite you to join us for breakfast with John Dugan, Chairman of the Board of Citigroup and former Comptroller of the Currency, who will discuss the philosophy behind Citigroup's decision to take a pioneering role in publicly disclosing unadjusted gender and diversity pay gaps and the various stakeholder reactions to that disclosure.

This is another in a series of events by ALLRISE DC, a newly established organization working to lift women's careers in financial services through mentoring, networking, and education. As with all of our events, this is open to financial services professionals from government, industry, law firms, and trade associations, and is intended to comply with the reception exception to the congressional gift rules and the de minimis exception under the Federal Banking Agencies' ethics rules.

We look forward to seeing you.
